

for a special issue of the journal e&i – elektrotechnik und informationstechnik on the topic “Women in electrical engineering and information technology“

e&i – elektrotechnik und informationstechnik

The technical-scientific journal e&i is the official journal of the Austrian Electrotechnical Association (OVE) and is published by Springer. e&i is read by opinion leaders of both, industry and management. The journal is also well-known to the international scientific community. Within the German-speaking areas, e&i is the only technical-scientific journal that publishes papers focusing on the whole field of electrical engineering and information technology. There are ten issues per year, each of them dedicated to one special topic.

Special topic „Women in electrical engineering and information technology“

In the second half of 2011 an interdisciplinary issue focusing on the topic of “women in electrical engineering and information technology“ will be published. It aims at illustrating the manifold fields of scientific work of women in electrical engineering and information technology as well as in associated subject areas.

Margrit Gelautz (Vienna Univ. of Technology, Inst. of Software Technology and Interactive Systems) and Birgit Pröll (University Linz, Inst. f. Application Oriented Knowledge Processing), chairwomen of femOVE, the platform for female engineers within the OVE, will be guest-editors for this special e&i-issue.

Submission procedure

For this special issue technical-scientific papers composed by women as first authors can be handed in on condition that they have not yet been published or submitted for publication elsewhere. Papers can both be written in German or English. Manuscripts should be submitted via the Online Manuscript Submission, Review and Tracking System Editorial Manager under the following web address: <https://www.editorialmanager.com/euin/>. All papers will be peer-reviewed.
